

An aerial, black and white photograph showing the construction of toll booths on the Tamar Bridge. The bridge's concrete deck is visible, with two sets of metal scaffolding and walkways extending from the sides towards the center. In the middle of the bridge, several small, rectangular toll booth structures are being built. A road leads from the toll booths towards a large, circular landscaped area with a central fountain or well. The surrounding landscape includes fields, trees, and some buildings in the distance. The overall scene depicts a major infrastructure project in progress.

FOTONOW

CROSSING LIVES
TAMAR BRIDGE
TOLL BOOTHS

FOTONOW

Did you work in the Tamar Bridge toll booths?
Or do you know someone who did?

For over 60 years, toll booth workers have been the face of this vital connection between Devon and Cornwall. Through the Crossing Lives project, Fotonow and Bridging The Tamar want to hear and preserve their stories.

To contribute or to find out more please email stories@fotonow.org or scan our QR code below.

Image credit (front): Nicholas Horne for Tamar Crossings

BRIDGINGTHETAMAR.ORG.UK
FOTONOW.ORG/CROSSINGLIVES2025

Funded by
UK Government

Funded by

